

PCA Launches Let's Get Building Campaign

(Edmonton, March 24, 2025) – The Progressive Contractors Association of Canada (PCA) whose member companies build major infrastructure projects across Canada, has launched a national awareness campaign called “Let’s Get Building” and we’re inviting Canadians to join us.

“Now is the time to build a stronger, more resilient and independent Canada by getting major energy and infrastructure projects built without further delay,” said Paul de Jong, President & CEO of the Progressive Contractors Association of Canada (PCA). “The sooner these nation building projects get underway, the sooner Canadians reap the rewards through new trading partnerships, good jobs and a more stable economy.”

PCA is urging parties during the federal election campaign to focus on getting major projects built. We look forward to working with governments, industry and Canadians to build projects that attract investment and strengthen communities in the face of global uncertainty.

“Let’s demonstrate to the world that our resource rich country can green light projects in the national interest through a clear, timely and objective approvals process,” added de Jong. “Let’s get building to instil a sense of strength and national pride. This is our moment to prove that we have the talent and determination to build a stronger Canada.”

To learn more about the Let’s Get Building campaign, and how you can show your support, go to: <http://letsgetbuilding.ca>

About the Progressive Contractors Association of Canada (PCA)

PCA is a national association of leading construction companies that build major infrastructure and capital projects. Its members employ more than 40,000 unionized construction workers who are represented primarily by CLAC. PCA advocates for a fair, open and competitive construction market.

For further information, contact:

Danna O’Brien, Danna@obriencommunications.ca 416-500-0699